

Introduction

Hi, I'm Sarah.

Let's follow along with Jane while she navigates the Internet to learn about the parts of a website.

Getting around on the Internet is a lot like navigating a city on foot to get from one place to another.

Just as you may visit a store, an office, and the library in person, you can visit the websites of those places to accomplish tasks.

When she starts out, Jane needs to make choices about where she wants to go, whether in person or on the Internet.

Sometimes she may make a wrong choice, taking her in the wrong direction.

However, when that happens, she can retrace her footsteps and change her course, so it is not a big deal if she makes a mistake.